

THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN MOTIVATIONAL PROFILES
AND ADMISSION GRADE POINT SCORES TO FIRST SEMESTER ATTRITION IN AN ASSOCIATE DEGREE NURSING (ADN) PROGRAM

by
Judy L. Alan Palmer

JANET LESSNER, Ph.D., Faculty Mentor and Chair
ELAINE GUERRAZZI Ph.D., Committee Member
JERRY HALVERSON, Ph.D., Committee Member
Harry McEnighan, Ed.D., Dean, School of Education

A Dissertation Presented in Partial Fulfillment
Of the Requirements for the Degree
Doctor of Philosophy

Capeella University
May 2008

The Relationship Between Motivational Profiles And Admission Grade Point Scores To First Semester Attrition In An Associate Degree Nursing ADN Program

Author : / Category :Uncategorized / Total Pages : 150 pages

Download The Relationship Between Motivational Profiles And Admission Grade Point Scores To First Semester Attrition In An Associate Degree Nursing ADN Program PDF

Summary : Free the relationship between motivational profiles and admission grade point scores to first semester attrition in an associate degree nursing adn program pdf download - nursing student attrition was the focus of this study and the purpose was to explore the possible relationship between students motivation profiles scores mps and grade point scores gps in combination as better predictors of nursing student attrition than grade points scores alone previous research has suggested that grades are best predictors of attrition however motivational orientations have also been examined to provide predictive value for student attrition at a variety of educational levels and institutions furthermore limited information was available about the motivational orientations of first semester nursing students and how these motivational orientations are related to student outcomes a questionnaire called the motivated strategies for learning questionnaire mslq was used to assess student s mps related to the first semester course a quantitative research methodology provided the foundation for the study and a predictive correlational design examined the relationships between gps mps and attrition as well as the predictive values of gps and mps related to attrition the results of this study supported previous research that grade point scores are the strongest predictors of nursing student attrition the results also showed that certain motivational orientation subscales contributed additional predictive value in specific subgroups of the nursing student participants the analysis of gps and mps in combination showed a modest increase in predictive value of attrition compared to gps alone

Pusblisher : ProQuest on 2008 / ISBN : 9780549599272

Download The Relationship Between

Motivational Profiles And Admission Grade Point
Scores To First Semester Attrition In An Associate Degree Nursing ADN Program PDF

PDF THE RELATIONSHIP BETWEEN MOTIVATIONAL PROFILES AND ADMISSION GRADE POINT SCORES TO FIRST SEMESTER ATTRITION IN AN ASSOCIATE DEGREE NURSING ADN PROGRAM

pre-admission scores, age and student success in nursing - an analysis of the relationship between nln pre-admission scores, ... of the associate degree nursing program ... admitting 40 associate degree nursing (adn)